"But you could not keep Forbes down with a few little setbacks, and it did not take him long to get on the move again. He hired a house in Flat bush, L. I. It was in the outskirts of the village, and we all went there to live. There had to be some excuse for a lot of men living in a house with a couple of negro servants, so we had a sign painted and hung out near the front gate, inscribed, 'Eureka Club.' In order to stop suspicious citizens from dining with us, and we treated them like lords. They would swear by us through thick and thin. We were all the time quietly perfecting our counterfeiting plant. Curley Peters, who was a photographer, and Sam Stetson, an engraver, were kept busily at work getting out the plates."

"They had some new trick that they were experimenting on for a long while, and, after a lot of failures, they found what they were after. Plates were made for the bills of a dozen or more banks, and Forbes, who was a good judge, said that they were the finest plates ever used to stamp bogus money. Peters was very reticent about the way the plates were made, and, as it was none of our business, we didn't care. Taken all the very worst, Peters was only a

DETECTIVE ARNOLD TELLS IT.

"The fact that the bogus money had appeared in different parts of the country at about the same time showed that there had been concerted action in getting rid of them in large batches by the gang, but this alone did not give any clue to the operators or their headquarters. So far as we knew they might have been located in any one of five large cities. Secret service operators were put to work in these cities with the intention of working back from the time the money was put out.

"In every city where the thieves did business they bought bonds and securities which could be disposed of anywhere, from bankers and brokers who were experts in detecting bogus money. In each city we got a good description of the man who bought the different man showed that it was a different man in each place. The descriptions were good so far as went. Naturally the government printing bureau came under suspicion because of the quality of the work, and every man at work in that department was examined with a searching Unfailing Stimulant.

Men have tried many things

the fast clock runs down sooner, and the unnatural stimulation only leaves the house it fills with revelry—more silent, more sad, more deserted, more dead. There is only one stimulus that never fails, and yet never intoxicates—Duty. Duty puts a blue shroud over every man—up in his heart makes a robe—into which the skylark happily always goes singing.—George D. Prentiss.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Henry J. White, 416 N. 4th St., Ft. Smith, Ark., suffered everything but a catarrh from terrible kidney trouble. I had a severe headache and dizzy spells, urinating blood and my back ached constantly. Doctor's treatment didn't help. Pills cured me completely and I have had no sign of trouble since.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups" etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
